That Guy by Kirk Williamson

What, with all the turkey preparations, I just don't have the brain energy for a new column this week. So enjoy this past blast from the January 17, 2007, issue. Oh, how things have changed ...

Astute readers of this column will remember that my very favoritest Prince song is "The Beautiful Ones" from Purple Rain. How stoked was I, then, when John Jones busted out a flawless rendition of it at Gentry? The answer: VERY.

Good to see the mayor of Boystown himself, Mr. Bill Pritchard at minibar. Of course, minibar isn't as mini as it used to be, ever since it doubled in size and added it's Siamese twin winebar to the mix. They got swank coming out of their ass. And I could recommend a good salve for that, by the way.

Seen Bobby Love lately? Someone's on the Kanye workout plan!

Speaking of Bobby Love's, see Intermission on page 23 this week for our new audience participation game, "Say What?!?". If you can wow me with a snarky caption for the bizarre snapshot I took at Bobby's, you will become the proud owner of some fresh new po'nography. There is no loftier reward for wit than hardcore fisting.

Something's stirring up south of Foster (and I ain't talking SoFo). What have you heard? Email me the dish.

Tajma Hall was beaming last night at Hydrate. I have that affect on big black girls. I've got that hint of fried chicken about me. Anyway, to see more of Taj and to support the Continental bound, stop in to Hunters January 27 for "We Are Family."

TAYLOR SWIFT AND THE GAME CHANGERS

Game changers. I think that might be a sports-originated term, but I grew up in a household that didn't know its touchdowns from its free-throws, so I'll let you verify that. For me, game changers have been those pivotal moments in life and career where you tap into that special something that makes you the shiniest star on Earth, if just for a moment. Recently, even though she's sold millions, Taylor Swift had one of those moments with the 1.2 million-selling album 1989. While a vast amount of Americans—mostly young girls—kept Taylor on the charts her entire short career, 1989 was the moment when the rest of the US and the world took notice and said, "Hey, that Swift girl's new album is kind of amazing," a reaction so palpable it even warranted its own SNL skit for "Swiftamine" for symptoms associated with realizing you actually like Taylor Swift. 1989 certainly earned it. Chock full of catchy, smartly written and even more smartly produced pop nuggets, it is so far her finest moment and took her even farther than before. She's obviously not the first pop female in this position.

Beyoncé, like Taylor, was no stranger to sales, number ones, and being a superstar before her fifth album, BEYONCE from last year. But the eponymous LP showed the world she could put a solid edge on her pop, add more hip-hop and make a literally flawless album for once in her career. And all with NO expectations, since it was a surprise drop. Look for her or Taylor to snatch that Best Album Grammy this year.

Madonna had a huge fan base, massive sales, but no respect until she hit it with her fourth album, Like a Prayer. Her first two were pop gems, but geared toward teens. Her third, True Blue, was so over-the-top happy and bubblegum (combined with her Who's That Girl flop) that she needed to reinvent with some edge. Like a Prayer was her first game changer with darker locks, stronger content and a few jarring melodies. Her second came with Ray of Light and won her a Grammy and even more cred.

Lady Gaga's The Fame LP was a nice sized hit, but didn't really enter the consciousness of your mother until The Fame Monster EP that accompanied a reissue the following year. With "Bad Romance," "Telephone" and "Alejandro," LG took her look and art cred to a new, more confident level and not only made every song on that EP a hit or cult hit, but made The Fame sound downright amateur. Of course, her two follow ups have been meager attempts to capture that firefly (with mixed results), but we'll always have Monster.

And finally, as much as she's divisive, Miley Cyrus turned a few heads with her moves and her vocal prowess on the oddly wonderful Bangerz last year. Despite her antics, strip it all away and Bangerz was one the strongest pop LPs in recent history and gained her a whole new demographic that hadn't known her as Hannah Montana.

Not everyone can have that game changer. While ladies like Katy Perry, Rihanna, Nicki Minaj and Britney Spears continue to sell, they're not winning over new fans or fan bases. There may be hope, but time is running out on their relevance and our patience. I'm hoping they can teach the new ones like Arianna, Iggy, and Jessie J that pop will put you on top but it's those risky game changers that will keep you there.

Oh, You Tease!: Nightspots congratulates Brian Kapolka (center), this year's recipient of the title of "Chicago's Sexiest Bartender" and the winner of this year's Barlesque 7 competition. Brian, representing Club Krave, beat out 17 other contestants, each representing a different Chicago LGBT bar. The closing party took place Sun., Nov. 23, at Progress Bar, home bar of last year's winner, Kyle Krietenmeyer (left). The night was hosted by none other than Debbie Fox (right). As the fundraising leader, Brian raised $11,915, which added to the overall total of $91,581 raised this year for Test Positive Aware Network (TPAN). Nightspots was a proud media sponsor of Barlesque 7.

The Bijou Chronicles

RETROSTUDS OF THE PAST: FOCUS ON LEE RYDER

by Madame Bubby

We at Bijou carry back issues of Manshots magazines, which was, I think, in its heyday (the late '80s and early '90s), offered a sophisticated approach to gay porn; its video reviews were generally cogent and intelligent, even scholarly. It treated gay porn in all its variety of genres like something that deserved thoughtful analysis, especially the movies now legendary directors like Steve Scott, Toby Ross, and Tom DeSimone made (movies Bijou carries, by the way).

And Manshots also offered some telling biographies of and interviews with most of the great gay porn stars of the past; again, treating their lives (and of course their activities on screen) as something as interesting and entertaining as any feature on a celebrity in a mainstream magazine like People.

And if there was a gay porn star, or "retrostud" who deserved celebrity treatment, it was Lee Ryder. But like many of the gay porn stars of that period, as noted in the all too common "Fade Out" feature at the back of so many back issues of Manshots, he died of AIDS-related complications in 1991.

Lee Ryder was born in 1959 as Darras Robert Pyron. He was California born and bred, raised in Laguna, and he graduated from Esperanza High School in Anaheim.

After Mark Reynolds discovered him and featured him in All American Boys, he literally made a splash in Falcon Studio's Huge in 1982.

He starred in thirteen features between 1982 and 1986, including Bijou titles Screenplay, A Few Good Men, Giants 1, and 2 X 10.

Now, of course, if one views these films, it's clear that Lee Ryder's cock is pretty much legendary. According to one Jeff Starkey, who reviewed the movie Screenplay in tandem with Ryder's appearances at the Bijou Theater to greet fans and sign autographs back in 1984:

"Ryder's cock is long, thick, and shapely and is crisscrossed by just the right number of lovely veins. Beneath it hang a perfectly balanced pair of what appear to be 5-pound balls. When his cock appears in public, it is usually hard as a baseball bat, with its swollen head looking purple and petulant."

Purple and petulant? Wow. Perhaps those adjectives could apply to the cock, but not the person.

In an interview with Stallion magazine, Lee, known for his sexually aggressive but also unforced, natural screen presence, seems rather low-key, both veering between a quiet confidence in himself, and also showing a somewhat self-deprecating attitude. Definitely not the "divo" attitude of so many celebrities: "Everyone wants to look at me, I am the Adonis with the giant cock and all should worship me."

In fact, in the interview, he actually seems rather pragmatic: he does it for the money, and for his business (he actually was a successful floral designer), but ... he actually doesn't see himself as a sex symbol. He just enjoys being himself, and letting a chink of vulnerability come out, being wanted.

We also find out in the interview he had a relationship with an older guy from ages 15 to 18, who tragically committed suicide soon after they broke up.

To add to the complexity of his character, despite his appearance at the Bijou and other venues as a gay porn celebrity, he actually admits he would rather not be recognized (he even goes to Europe to escape the attention). He notices, even when he does, the guys stay away, or "they stare—I guess I do show a big crotch—or they look at my eyes."

To be honest, at least for me, the eyes can be just as erotic as, especially in Ryder's case, a dick of death. And Ryder himself admits in the interview that he loves his eyes. And rightly so!

His eyes make love to the camera, like those of that famous movie star Joan Crawford (completely the opposite in her approach to celebrity). The eyes themselves create a unique effect in the viewer; they seem to draw you in with a promise of something intense; you think he is looking directly at you via the camera, which could satisfy your desire, but you at the same time feel like you will always want more. Perhaps it's their narrow shape but also richly colored pupils. I don't know, but I can't stop looking at his picture on the cover on Stallion magazine as I write this piece.

And I promise you, you won't be able to take your eyes off of Lee Ryder in our remastering of Huge (now Huge 1) as he beats his meat while perched on the toilet making it bigger, hotter and harder. He, Rick Jensen and Matt Stoker roll around on the cold concrete floor, licking each other's hairy armpits and sitting on each other's faces.

Check out our bijouworld.com for titles on DVD featuring Lee Ryder, and bijougayporn.com to stream videos featuring this hot retrostud.

Confessions of a Nunn

by Jerry Nunn

JUDGING A PORN BY ITS COVER

Jerry Nunn: Happy Thanksgiving!
Diablo: You picked the perfect porno.
JN: I hope everyone gets stuffed this week.
D: After this cover I'm feeling horny.

Horns of Plenty Part 1

by Kristen Bjorn
Starring Carlos Montenegro and Bruno Jones

Two models stroll through the countryside and take a quickie break.

JN: The music is so soothing to me.
D: It makes me want to fall asleep.
JN: This is a throwback to the old erotica type of adult movies.
D: The production standards are high with this one.
JN: Check out that vein on his abdomen from working out.
D: Check out that vein on the other one's penis from working it!
JN: Lighting so good for an outdoor scene that it's almost unbelievable.
D: When you got the money, honey, who needs the sun?
JN: I think I need a vacation after watching this. Snow is coming!
D: Marius Mugler must have the most perfectly trimmed penis I have seen in a while.
JN: Carlos Montenegro's massive arm tattoo seems new. It's a little scabby.
D: They are 69-ing in front a woodpile. I hope the logs don't roll over them.
JN: Carlos has sprouted some wood by the wood.
D: And it's a two-by-four!
JN: Let me translate from Spanish what he's saying since there are no subtitles. "Drink my cum, papi!"
D: Thank you. I would never have known what was going on.
JN: What a decorative cock ring that is.
D: Leave it to Europeans to mix a little style in with the sex.

Bruno Jones, Pau Casserras, and Richard Rubio head over to the haystack for a ménage-a-trois.

JN: Time for a roll in the heyyy.
D: Wait, his name is Pau? Couldn't he finish it with an L?
JN: He's from Spain, that letter doesn't sound the same in their language anyway.
D: There are always multiple cummers with Kristen directing.
JN: It's because they shoot for several days, literally.
D: They just jumped into a window to make out inside the house.
JN: It is the perfect Thanksgiving set complete with a sun-dried corncob tacked on the wall.
D: The lighting is a little darker than before when they were outside.
JN: All they have are Little House on the Prairie lanterns to see by here.
D: I hope no one gets lost in the dark.
JN: I'm sure they can grope around and be fine.

Three models pop their heads out of the windows of the old stone house to say hello.
JN: This is like a porn version of the old TV show Laugh-In.
D: I don't think that is Ruth Buzzi, but maybe Dick Martin.
JN: We are really showing our age.
D: Mike Colucci opened those jeans up like a Christmas present.
JN: Let's not get ahead of ourselves on that holiday. I've not started shopping.
D: I will give Carlucci's chest a 10!
JN: Those decorative plates attached to the wall are distracting me.
D: You have to admit we have had a lot worse set furniture in past movie reviews.
JN: The rhythm is gonna get you, listen to the slapping sound while he pounds him.

Nunn's Golden Rule:
One should bring bug spray and sunscreen while shooting naked outside.
Final Judgment:
Jerry Nunn: Crucifix up.
Diablo: Pitchfork up.

Plenty more porn can be found at www.KristenBjorn.com.
